

METHOD AND APPARATUS FOR DETECTING HIGH-ENERGY RADIATION USING A PULSE MODE ION CHAMBER

Abstract

A method for measuring high-energy radiation includes applying a voltage pulse to electrodes in an ion chamber filled with a gas capable of forming charged ions by the high-energy radiation; measuring an ion current signal related to ion currents induced by the voltage pulse; and determining a magnitude of the high-energy radiation based on the ion current signal.

62622_1